The document consists of a typewritten page extracted from the minutes of a Berlin City Planning Commission meeting on 21 May 1952. The information covers three items:

1. Plans for a junction station were discussed. The City Planning Commission submitted a plan for locating the station at Lehrte Station in Berlin. The Reichsbahn had previously developed a plan locating the new station in the center of the city. It was decided that both organizations should cooperate in further developing both plans.

2. Erwin Kramer, Director General of the Reichsbahn, reported on the following current projects: remodeling of Lichtenberg station in Berlin, necessity to plan electrification of the Lichtenberg-Marzahn-Ahrensfelde railroad line, shortening of the Outer Belt line at Blankenburg, other changes in the Outer Belt line, and planning of the shunting station Wuhlheide. [No detail given.]

3. Upon suggestion of the Directorate General of the Reichsbahn a 50-meter wide safety zone will be established along the railroad tracks in which no construction will be allowed.
